BIOGRAPHY

Murdarich Big & Murdarich Lil

Miami will always be one of the most unique cities in the world. Everything from the cultures, sports, diversity, to the music are what makes the city thrive. But these Miami-native twin brothers, Murdarich Lil and Murdarich Big, are the ones to break the cities Rap threshold.

So why the name MurdaRich? When they started off, the brothers didn't know what name to go with. They knew they could leverage the whole, "Twin," thing, but knowing that would be too cliché, MRG (Murda Rich Gang) came to life. MRG Big and MRG Lil, to be exact, but what exactly did that mean?

Getting kicked out of multiple high schools and dodging conflicts with the law was a way of life for the twins. It wasn't until the tragedies of the duo's closest friends, Rich and Murda, who were shot and killed, that they knew a pivotal change had to take place. The following day the brothers decided to dedicate their lives to music. Their duo name helps keep the memory of their lost friends alive. According to MurdaRich Big, "When someone dies, you forget after awhile. But every time you say our name, they live through us everyday!"

These Overtown natives embody the current state of the urban side of Miami, which happens to be a side that few are exposed to. With their Honduran background intertwined with the roots of Miami's inner city, Murdarich Big and Murdarich Lil unapologetically tell their story, a story that's not only theirs, but is shared with thousands of youth across the city. Inspired by the old soul of Soulja Slim and the new sounds of Young Thug and Ralo; this duo is on par to set the tone of Miami's Rap scene for the next generation.

Opportunities are scarce where these two come from. Music was their only ticket out of a life of crime and violence. Murdarich Lil and Murdarich Big's sole focus is to keep Miami's namesake alive and well for years to come. They carry the torch for every kid who couldn't get off their block and see anything outside the hood. Their music tells the story for those kids who couldn't tell their own and provides hope for those looking for a way out.
